Senators Beach and Woelfel offered the following resolution:

Senate Concurrent Resolution 53—Requesting the Joint Committee on Government and Finance conduct a study regarding providing free feminine hygiene products to all female students in grades six through 12 in West Virginia public schools.

Whereas, Feminine hygiene products are not easily accessible to many female students and this causes one in five girls in the United States to miss school due to not having access to those products; and

Whereas, Although school nurses have a limited supply of feminine hygiene products, schools do not keep an adequate supply for female students every time they need them; and

Whereas, Feminine hygiene products are, for some students, too expensive, creating a hardship for some female students' families to afford to get them for their children; and

Whereas, In the United States, health care insurance plans do not cover feminine hygiene products; and

Whereas, Adolescents growing up can be self-conscious, so female students go to great efforts to avoid personal embarrassment by taking all of their belongings to the restroom in order to not show other students their tampon or sanitary napkin; and

Whereas, For young teenage girls, it can be challenging adjusting to puberty, and menstruation is uniquely challenging, and school's daily routines can be difficult for younger females to manage as they adjust to this new routine; and

Whereas, Female students are forced to ask their teachers or counselors for permission to go to the nurse's office in order to see if they can get a tampon or sanitary napkin, which causes students to feel disinclined to get them; and

Whereas, Many West Virginia public school teachers feel obligated to spend their own money to keep a supply of feminine hygiene products in their classrooms for female students who may find themselves unprepared, in order to save their female students from embarrassing situations; and

Whereas, The provision of general hygiene products that all students use such as toilet paper, soap, and paper towels reflect that public schools realize that while students are at school it is the school's responsibility to provide them certain assistance; and

Whereas, Grades six through 12 are a crucial time in shaping a child's life, and female students should not have to be anxious about another student knowing they need feminine hygiene products, as it is a very normal monthly occurrence. The benefits to providing female students availability and use of these products is worthy of study; therefore, be it
